

THE ONE THING

“Actively listen and probe Renata's deeper impact before jumping to program strategy.”

Projected score 84 +8.0

RED FLAGS · 3

- The coach interrupted Renata before she fully explained the sticking point.
- The coach moved into program strategy before clarifying the client's deeper risk and emotional context.
- The call ended with a clean plan, but not a strong client-owned commitment.

OVERALL SCORE

INCONSISTENT

Projected score 84 / 100 +8.0

THE BRIEF

The call had a solid structure and decent follow-through, but the coaching stayed too surface-level in the middle of the conversation. Renata was never pushed to go deeper on the emotional or identity-level stakes behind her plateau, and the coach moved quickly into program logistics before fully diagnosing what was actually blocking her momentum. That softness reduced trust and made the accountability section feel more procedural than personal.

CAP CONDITIONS MET · NO SCORE PENALTY

2 conditions met

- Coach speaks more than 75% of the call (client passive / monologue)
- No action steps stated for either party before close

No penalty applied because these conditions did not further reduce an already-limited dimension score.

CAP APPLIED · SCORE PENALTY

Client struggle present but ignored, minimized, avoided, or coach becomes defensive

The client raised a real struggle around consistency and the coach moved past it without deeper coaching.

DIMENSIONS

01 Check-In & Connection

8 / 10

STRONG

The coach started with genuine curiosity and set a clear purpose for the call. Renata was invited to explain her state without feeling rushed, and the coach reflected back a realistic sense of what she was carrying. The opening felt warm and steady, though it stayed a little more general than best-in-class.

EVIDENCE

- L5 Coach Hey Renata, I want to start with how this week actually felt for you. What felt easiest, and what felt heavier than it should have?
- L5 Client I've been frustrated because I know the plan, I just can't get my consistency back.

QUICK FIX

!' Ask one more question that gets to the emotional cost of the plateau before moving into program content.

02 Diagnostics Review

7 / 10

STRONG

The review was practical and mostly relevant, but it lacked depth. The coach identified a few movement issues without fully linking them to Renata's stated pain points and season of life. That made the feedback useful but not especially memorable.

EVIDENCE

- L12 Coach I noticed your rib flare in the squat pattern is showing up when you get tired. That tells me your posture is not actually the issue so much as your breathing and trunk control...
- L12 Client That makes sense, I feel like I lose control when I get tired.

QUICK FIX

!' Choose one or two movement patterns and tie each observation directly to the exact client goal or frustration she described.

03 Program Focus + Vision

10 / 15

STRONG

The program context was explained well enough to make the block feel manageable, but the long-term vision piece was only lightly touched. Renata heard a plan, but not a strong emotional case for why this specific phase mattered in the context of her identity and 12-month goals.

EVIDENCE

- L20 Coach We're not trying to make this perfect; we're trying to make your body resilient enough to keep showing up.
- L20 Client I do want to feel more confident in my body again.

QUICK FIX

!' Name the specific vision or identity shift Renata is chasing and connect the current block to it in plain language.

04 Movement Coaching Quality

STRONG

The coach adjusted some movement cues and made the session feel active, but the quality of exchange remained more instructional than exploratory. The client received feedback, yet the coaching did not fully deepen into why the pattern happened in the moment or how it connected to her goals.

EVIDENCE

- L25 Coach Keep your ribs down and your breath out as you drive through the floor.
- L25 Client Okay, I can feel the difference when I focus there.

QUICK FIX

! Ask Renata where she feels the movement most and then adapt the correction around what she reports instead of prescribing from the outside.

05 Adjustments & Strategy

7 / 10

STRONG

The coach offered practical adjustments and framed them as strategic, which helped. However, the rationale remained slightly too generic to fully reassure Renata that this was a deliberate protective move rather than a setback.

EVIDENCE

- L29 Coach I'm going to reduce the load for this block and keep the pattern simple so you can build consistency without creating more stress.

QUICK FIX

! Explain why the adjustment is protecting long-term progress and validate the client's experience of the change instead of simply naming the tweak.

06 Action Steps & Accountability

10 / 15

STRONG

The call ended with clear action items, but the accountability felt more coach-driven than client-owned. Renata nodded along, but the commitment did not fully sound like her own language or a measurable weekly anchor.

EVIDENCE

- L36 Coach Before our next check-in, I want you to do three things: finish the week, keep the plan simple, and send the video.
- L36 Client Sure, I can do that.

QUICK FIX

! Turn the next step into a single clear client-owned commitment with a date or trigger, not a list of tasks.

07 Accountability Anchor

MID

There was some accountability, but it was diluted across several tasks and not anchored to a clear consequence. The coach could have made one commitment stand out as the real gate for progression.

EVIDENCE

- L38 Coach I want you to send me a quick update by Friday and show me a couple of videos before we move forward.
- L38 Client Okay, that makes sense.

QUICK FIX

!' Choose one named anchor task that the client owns and tie it to the coach's progression decision.

08 Struggle Handling

0 / 5

FAIL

This is the clearest missed moment in the call. Renata named real frustration and inconsistency, but the coach did not slow down enough to explore the emotional driver or reframe the setback. The issue was treated as logistics instead of a coachable struggle.

EVIDENCE

- L30 Client I feel like I've been trying so hard and it just keeps falling apart.
- L30 Coach Let's not overthink it; we'll just simplify the plan.

QUICK FIX

!' Pause on the plan, ask what the setback is actually costing Renata emotionally, and then reframe the next move around her why.

09 Close Quality

3 / 5

MID

The close was warm and polite, but not energizing. The coach recognized effort without making a strong emotional landing or naming the exact win that mattered in this session.

EVIDENCE

- L40 Coach You're doing a lot better than you think, and I appreciate the honesty. Let's keep it simple and build from here.

QUICK FIX

!' End by naming the specific breakthrough or progress from this call and tie it to what happens next.

10 Next Call Booking

ELITE

The next call was booked live before the end of the session, which creates continuity and prevents drift. This is a strength and a good anchor for the client.

EVIDENCE

- L44 Coach I can see you on Thursday at 2, and we'll follow up on that video before then.
- L44 Client Yes, that works.

QUICK FIX

!' Keep the next call locked in live and restate the outcome of the next step when you close.

11 Continuity & Follow-Up Clarity

3 / 5

MID

The follow-up process was mentioned, but it was not specific enough to make the chain of action crystal clear. The client could probably tell what would happen next, but not with total confidence.

EVIDENCE

- L42 Coach I'll send you some feedback after you send the video this week.

QUICK FIX

!' State the exact handoff: what Renata sends, when she sends it, and when the coach will respond.

12 Structure & Time Management

4 / 5

STRONG

The structure was mostly clear and the call didn't feel chaotic. A few sections were slightly compressed, but the overall flow was professional and controlled.

EVIDENCE

- L3 Coach Let's start with your rhythm this week and then I'll help us adjust from there.

QUICK FIX

!' Protect one or two extra minutes for the emotional diagnosis and the final accountability anchor so the flow feels less rushed.
